Arrival of the Anglo-Saxon.

New York, Jan. 19.—The London Times says:

In the event of no Congress being held, all that will remain will be to reorganize the Central Italian State which has been formed out of Romagna and the Duchies, either as an independent principality, or as a part of the Italian monarchy, to take on an independent, and to take on the Pope and his supporters, to their remedy.

A dispatch from Rome, the 18th inst., says that the Duke of Gramont had positively stated to the Holy See that the papalists, "The Pope and his Congress," does not contain the programme of the Italian revolution, and it was hoped he would be represented in the Congress in Italy.

Prince Gortchakov left St. Petersburg on the 24th for Paris.

The latest accounts from the continent do not confirm the statement that the Congress would not be held. On the contrary it was reported in Paris that the Congress would meet in the month of April.

The "Great Britain"—The Constitutional Magazine publishes a reform bill which was introduced by the House of Commons, and according to the London Herald, the bill in question has been published entirely without the sanction of the House of Commons.

The Daily News remarks that the projected Congress is indefinitely postponed, and no friend of the cause of Italian unity can regret the temporary difficulty in which diplomacy finds itself, as every month gained counts in the struggle for Italian unity, and justifies the revolution being not now known.

XXXV Congress—First Session.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Says: Mr. Douglass' resolution, introduced by the majority, for a bill for the better suppression of intemperance, was, specially assigned for Monday.

A debate of some length took place on the question whether the Senate had a right to amend any business until the House organizes. The majority of the Senate, however, overruled a point of order to that effect, and referring a private bill on which the debate had sprung up to the committee on private bills.

Five thousand five hundred extra copies of the Treasury Report were ordered to be printed.

Mr. King offered a resolution proposing a select committee to investigate whether any portion of the public printing appropriation had been applied to the support of any newspapers, especially the Constitution, Pennsylvania, and as to the contract said to have been made by Mr. Brown, by which he was to receive $20,000 per year. Also, whether any member of the government was prior to its publication, and whether the resolution in question had been made in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Hiram said that John Brown was a tool of the Republicans, and no Republican could risk the responsibility. Public opinion was not in favor of such a resolution, and such a resolution would be a disgrace to the House. The House was already strangled by the House. The House was already strangled by the House.
